The History of Guide Lamp a Division of General Motors

Guide fog or driving lights are an often-prized accessory for collector car owners as they were in days gone by. Typically, these lights were dealer- or owner-installed, even though they were a listed factory accessory that could be ordered with a new car. Guide was a GM division responsible for lighting products.

Light Aiming Guide Proper auxiliary lamp aiming is the most important part of an installation. If the lamps are not properly aimed they will not achieve optimum performance and they can be very dangerous. The danger comes from the beam pattern being aimed right into oncoming vehicles thus blinding the driver.

Typically, driving lights are mounted above the front bumper about 14 to 30 inches from the ground to provide extra high-beam illumination. Driving lights can be mounted below the bumper, although they will not be as effective because the light will hit the ground sooner and reduce the range of the light.
