Thus, the old man is interpreted as the former way of life, that of an unbeliever. In this sense, the Christian has two competing capacities within him—the old capacity to sin and the new capacity to resist sinning. The unbeliever has no such competition within; he does not have the capacity for godliness because he has only the sin nature.

About The Old Man and the Sea In April of 1936, Hemingway published an essay in Esquire magazine entitled "On the Blue Water: A Gulf Stream Letter," which contained a paragraph about an old man who went fishing alone in a skiff far out at sea, landed a huge marlin, and then lost much of it to sharks.

About The Old Man and the Sea

Among the many aspects of the story, it is the idea of redefining success and victory that makes The Old Man and the Sea, Ernest Hemingway's classic novella, so profound. It is a seemingly simple story: Santiago is an old, experienced fisherman who hasn't brought in a catch for months.
